

A digital control system employs learning algorithms to control a network of active and passive circuits and MEMS switch components to automatically match subsystem impedances for maximum power transfer and back-reflection suppression.